Mindset

The recent lecture we watched had a plethora of messages that resonated with me, but more so motivated me even more. In the recent discussion assignment, we were told to illustrate our perspective on mindset. I fully believe that mindset is directly tied to the concept of achieving your childhood dreams. Without mindset, there will be a lack of drive, knowledge, and expertise in your specific dream field that will prevent you from achieving whatever it is that will make you happy. I am personally on a two year long journey and counting, chasing my dreams and manifesting my goals as we speak. The lecture not only made great points on the steps to getting there, but motivated me and made me realize the importance of staying there once successful. Whatever it is you are chasing, it is naive to view it as a destination, rather than a journey. If the goal is undesirable along the way and there are numerous points of lack of motivation, you will never be able to maintain the journey in the long run.
